Faculty Senate Rules and Regulations Section on pre-tenure review:
<https://documents.ku.edu/policies/governance/FSRR.htm#art6sect4>

6.4.2. Progress Toward Tenure Review. Approximately midway between a faculty member's appointment and mandatory review year (usually the third year), under guidelines issued by the Provost, a department, college, or school shall conduct a formal review of a non-tenured faculty member's progress toward tenure. The progress toward tenure review is intended to provide faculty members with a meaningful appraisal of their progress toward tenure and orient them toward basic aspects of the tenure process. Neither the record of the review nor its results shall be included in a faculty member's promotion and tenure record and recommendations for or against promotion and tenure should not be influenced by favorable or unfavorable results of the progress toward tenure review. This limitation does not prevent consideration, during the promotion and tenure review, of the same documents and information considered for purposes of the progress toward tenure review.

PTTR Process

- Multi-level peer review process similar to mandatory review: Department and School/CLAS
- Standards for review: Department, School/CLAS, and University criteria
- The form is only a tool to ensure that committees have equivalent information on all candidates
- Concentrate on presenting information that highlights your accomplishments

PTTR Outcomes

- Constructive advice and direction for continuation of the probationary period
- Another PTTR review in year four
- Notice of non-reappointment

KU Philosophy

- We are invested in your success!
- Goal for the P & T process:
 - Demonstrate a record of accomplishments in teaching, research, and service that indicate you will be a productive member of the faculty in the future
 - PTTR is a mechanism that allows you to gauge your progress toward this goal
